Fruit Ridge Notes - Apples - Friday - April 7th - 2017

Hello from Sunny Fruit Ridge Avenue !! Wow...Seems real Nice.

...But ...The next 3 days forecasted Highs are 60*-66*-67* ...with lows 49*-57*-46* ... which means of course Winter is over.

Be extra attentive to those isolated spots where you had a little bit of GreenTip showing up ahead of that long-term-cold-extremely-wet-ugly-crap stretch.

AppleScab Ascospores really like that cold-wet crap.

Are you still deciding which Copper product to use ?? CS2005 does not paint your equipment blue...Seriously ...No Blue Paint...and it costs less per acre than what they're pushing down the street.

Thinking Ahead...It'll be here before we know it.... and I see G.S.Long-Yakima is sharing some Data from some Bloom-Freeze-Trials they did.

They did the Trial in a 'Freeze Chamber' for fine-tuned accuracy, and also in the Orchard

Trees in the Orchard - actual Apple Count - the UnTreated // Treated == 275//560 350//500 160//300 160//380and in the Freeze Chamber the Untreated suffered 400% more BloomKill than the Treated suffered.

The Treatment DiKaP from Redox.
Incidentally....Nobody else has this stuff... Nobody even knows how they are making this stuff.

But ask your nearest BNR Rep ...?? Yup - They got it -

Same stuff.  I dont think they are intentionally misleading; it's just that they know so much that isn't so.

Enjoy the SunShine !!!!
